James S. Still Joins MainStream Management to Lead its Mid-Atlantic Office

CEDAR RAPIDS (October 14, 2009) – MainStream Management, LLC, a global professional services firm that specializes in crisis management, performance improvement and transaction services, today announced the addition of new Managing Director, James S. Still, to lead the company's mid-Atlantic office. Mr. Still is deeply experienced in working with troubled companies in creating shareholder value as well as working with organizations growing through acquisition. Prior to joining MainStream, Mr. Still was the head of investment banking at Boening & Scattergood where he focused on the expansion of the company's advisory business to privately-held and publicly-traded companies in the middle market.

Mr. Still's experience includes being the founding partner of RDC Advisors, LLC, a small to middle market investment advisory firm. Mr. Still has direct experience as the Chief Executive Officer of four companies serving the middle market: GovXcel, Inc., a municipal based software company; Afinitas, a start-up Internet company; Atlantic American Trust, a $700 million privately-held investment trust with holdings throughout the mid-Atlantic region; and Bell Atlantic Properties, the wholly-owned investment real estate arm of Bell Atlantic Corporation. Mr. Still held the position of vice president of planning and acquisitions for Bell Atlantic Capital Corporation, the diversified financial services arm of Bell Atlantic Corporation, and was responsible for all M&A activity for the $3 billion financial services subsidiary.

Mr. Still holds a Bachelor of Arts in Economics and Psychology from Amherst College and a Masters of Business Administration from the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania. He serves as a board member of various companies in the Philadelphia area, as well as in a volunteer capacity at a number of charitable, educational, and civic organizations.
